

RANDOM ACTS OF TERROR

JUNE 23RD

Luis Rivas lives in Los Angeles, California. He was a telemarketer, construction worker, flower delivery driver, fast food cashier, sales clerk, non-profit, canvasser, adult store and strip club manager and package handler/zip code sorter. His work has appeared in numerous small press publications. He is currently the poetry editor at Gloom Cupboard and is continuing his studies in journalism and Chicana/o Studies at California State University of Northridge and Los Angeles City College. He is currently a part-time tutor and social justice activist.

Citizens for Decent Literature Press
(a project of The Literary Underground)
is not the least bit nervous, no seriously, not nervous at all... to announce the publication on June 23, 2013 of Random Acts of Terror, a book of poetry
by Luis Rivas.
